Introduction

Today's traveler has evolved. Beyond seeking information and high-quality services, they look for experiences that engage the senses, inspire learning, create meaningful connections, and foster personal growth, while making a positive impact on the destinations they visit.

Authentic and sustainable travel experiences are emerging across Peru's key tourist destinations, places defined by stunning natural landscapes, living culture, rich traditions and fascinating stories, often away from the crowds; driven by organized communities that safeguard and protect their heritage. They offer travelers the opportunity to immerse themselves, connect deeply, and discover Peru from a different perspective.

This catalog compiles 29 of the leading Community Tourism experiences rooted in the living culture and unique natural environments of their territories, highlighting their key attributes, distinctive features, activities, services, and essential information, making it a valuable tool for tour operators and travel agents. It aims to contribute to the development of innovative travel proposals for travelers eager for experiences, who are increasingly interested in sustainable and responsible travel that enhances their personal perspective as it explores and connects with the places they visit.

Community Tourism offers a different way to discover Peru, guided by local communities committed to developing tourism that is respectful and harmonious with its environment. Let's build a new way of doing tourism together.

Discover Peru through Community Tourism!

What are Community Tourism experiences like?

These are authentic and sustainable trips that blend nature, adventure, and living culture, led by organized communities that preserve and share their heritage through personalized encounters that generate a deep emotional connection between visitors and the surrounding environment, creating unforgettable and enriching moments, and positively impacting the host communities.

Below, you will find a set of icons representing each experience category, making it easy to identify the type of offering provided by each community.

Core features of Community Tourism Experiences

The tourism activities and services that make up their offerings have unique characteristics, shaped by the tourism potential of their regions and sociocultural elements, including:

High levels of authenticity allow travelers to connect deeply with local culture and worldview of communities that maintain their identity intact.

Designed and offered to meet market demand, providing a personalized experience.

Communities actively play a leading role in the tourism offerings and management of their territories, creating an experience that positively impacts their environment and livelihoods.

Hands-on, participatory activities through travelers' interaction in the daily community life, fostering the exchange of knowledge and expertise.

Activities and services are offered in a comprehensive and integrated manner (accommodation, food, information, etc.).

Emphasizes strong collaboration, driving shared value and collective well-being.

Offers a variety of activities that combine nature, adventure, and culture in a single, non-mass-market and largely unexplored destination that remains in harmony with the environment.

It coordinates tourist routes and circuits located in its communities, creating collaborative networks under management with a sustainable approach.

Responsible use of heritage, promoting its conservation and ensuring sustainability.

Tourism enterprises are community-led and family-operated, promoting local empowerment, self-management, and inclusive economic opportunities.

ITINERARY

Cuyuni

Ancestral wisdom, mysticism, and living nature in the Andes

In Cuyuni, time slows down in its traditional tambos, where you can witness the ancestral process of dehydrating lisas (olluco), a staple food in the local diet. Discover the textile mastery of the local artisans, participating in a process that begins with shearing and culminates in the intricate art of weaving. The journey reaches its peak at the Apacheta Pass at 4,185 m.a.s.l. with a ceremony of gratitude to the Pachamama under the eye of the imposing Ausangate snow-capped mountain. Surrounded by pine forests and high-Andean wildlife, conclude your journey by savoring some of the region's most prized wild mushrooms.

How can you optimize the community tourism experience for your travelers?

- Take Care of the Environment: Avoid littering and polluting the places and communities you visit.

- Be Fair: Pay fair prices for the services offered by communities.

- Contact a local interpreter who, together with your guide, will enrich your experience.

- Promote Conservation: Respect the habitats of local flora and fauna.

- Be Respectful: Honor traditions, customs, and ways of life.

- Promote the consumption of local products, boosting the local economy and enhancing the experience.

- Co-create Experiences: Work with the community to design the visitor's experience.

- Foster interaction and cultural exchange between visitors and communities.

- Remember that your visit contributes to the development of these communities.

Special thanks

We sincerely thank the public and private institutions, international organizations, and individuals who are passionate about Community-Based Tourism for sharing their photographs and videos with us. Their valuable contributions bring this catalog to life and help showcase the authenticity of each experience, highlighting the cultural heritage, natural wealth, and unique essence of Community-Based Tourism in Peru.
